His run was exciting but not easy. He slept in a tent or in hotels. Running in Sweden was difficult because of the dangerous roads. In Japan one night he couldn't find his hotel because he couldn't speak Japanese. In Australia, the temperature was 45 degrees. Jasper enjoyed running in Siberia because people were very kind. They invited him into their houses for food and drink. He flew from Australia to America and then to Canada. Finally, he went back to Europe and crossed the finishing line on 23 October 2006.

With 26,000 kilometres and 26 pairs of running shoes, Jasper completed his world run. His new book 'The Runner's Guide to the Planet' is popular. Many people around the world like reading it. Jasper's next plan is to run from the north of Europe to South of Africa.
