Q Conclusion:

In short, Sabah Al Ahmad Natural Reserve is not just a place; it's a sanctuary for natural life.

Dear Ahmad,

I hope this email finds you well. I recently visited Sabah Al Ahmad Natural Reserve during a school trip. I am writing this email to describe the animals, plants and the natural features of the place that I have seen.

The reserve is in the north-eastern part of Kuwait, on Subiya Road. Its area is around 331 square kilometers. I enjoyed watching birds like flamingos and eagles. There are more than 250 types of birds. Also, I saw deer, camels, foxes and ostriches. Also, the area is covered with trees and some types of flowers. Moreover, there are different types of insects.

What about the natural features of the place? The area is divided between a coastal and desert area. On the coast, I saw sabkhas (salt areas). The desert area is covered with a mix of golden desert sands and some rocks. In addition, the view is wonderful at sunset.

In short, Sabah Al Ahmad Natural Reserve is not just a place; it's a sanctuary for natural life. I recommend you visit and enjoy it. Thank you for reading my email.

Best regards,

Q Conclusion:

In conclusion, I think that we should invest in education and healthcare, and at the same time raise awareness to protect endangered species.

Do you think we should spend money on endangered animals? In this essay, I will write about the arguments for and against spending money on saving endangered animals.

On the one hand, what are the arguments for spending money on saving endangered animals? First, we should save animals because they are an important part of nature. Second, these animals can keep balance in nature. Moreover, rare animals like pandas can attract a lot of tourists. That will help in boosting the economy of the country.

On the other hand, what are the arguments against spending money on saving endangered animals? A lot of people think that Man is more important. Instead of wasting money on saving animals, we can build more schools, universities, and hospitals. In addition, some people believe that helping poor people is better than saving endangered animals.

In conclusion, I think that we should invest in education and healthcare, and at the same time raise awareness to protect endangered species.

- affecting the whole world

📌 Conclusion:

In conclusion, I think that environmental problems are more dangerous than natural disasters.

Have you ever asked which one is more destructive, natural disasters or environmental problems? Some people say that natural disasters are more dangerous than environmental problems, others argue against that. In this essay, I will write about both arguments and state my own opinion on the issue.

On the one hand, some people think that natural disasters are more destructive than environmental problems. First, they say that natural disasters happen suddenly. Second, they kill thousands of people like an earthquake or a Tsunami. Third, they can destroy whole cities and villages. Moreover, they can't be controlled.

On the other hand, some people say that environmental problems are more destructive than natural disasters. First, they say pollution and deforestation are causing more damage to our world. Second, they can cause the death of people, animals, and plants. Third, they can lead to lack of food and water. Furthermore, environmental problems can affect the whole world.

In conclusion, I think that environmental problems are more dangerous than natural disasters. However, we can deal with both of them if we prepare well.

Unit 12 : The Power of Nature

Write on the following topic: (Descriptive)

“Earthquakes have become a destructive force that can destroy everything.”
Plan and write an essay of about 14 sentences (160 words) describing earthquakes and their bad effects on people and properties.

Outline

Q Introduction:

In this essay, I will write about an earthquake and its bad effects on people and properties.

Q Body:

▪ Paragraph 1: What is an earthquake?

- sudden shaking
- high energy underground
- happening in some locations
- different levels of power

▪ Paragraph 2: What are the dangerous effects of earthquakes?

- Killing thousands of people
- destroying buildings
- tsunamis power
- destroying natural habitats

Q Conclusion:

In conclusion, earthquakes are very destructive natural disasters.

Have you ever witnessed an earthquake? Earthquakes are doing great damage to the world every year. In this essay, I will write about earthquakes and their bad effects on people and properties.

What is an earthquake? First, an earthquake is a sudden, violent shaking of the ground in a certain area. Second, it happens due to great pressure and energy underground. Moreover, earthquakes happen in some locations in the world more often than others. Additionally, they have different levels of strength and power.

What are the bad effects of earthquakes? First, earthquakes can kill thousands of people in just a few minutes. They can also destroy buildings and properties, so people become homeless. Second, underwater earthquakes cause tsunamis which destroy hundreds of coastal cities. Moreover, earthquakes can destroy natural habitats. That can lead to the death of animals and plants.

In conclusion, earthquakes are very destructive natural disasters. We should be prepared and have emergency plans to reduce the losses.
